

Non-fiction-Speeches

How do great speeches continue to speak to us? Through other ^{speeches}, film, ~~music~~, memory.

Abraham Lincoln's - 'Government ~~for~~ ^{of} the people, by the people for the people speech'. Would be one of the most published speeches in American history it may have only went for 2 1/2 minutes, it may not have said 2 much, it may ~~not~~ have even ~~got~~ ^{won} him any friends but people still remember it.

How? In many a film it is said at least in part, e.g 'Kindergarten Cop'. This mainstream film starring Arnold ~~the~~ Schwarzenegger has a cute scene at the fair where his class perform this speech all tear friendly with their cotton wool grey beards, there ^a infant accents and a bad guy around somewhere.

Martin Luther King's 'I have a dream' speech is one that'll be in the memory of those who not only heard him give it whether from a tape or live but for those who read or just plain hear about it. Why?

Not only was it a well written speech straight from the heart but it was ~~to~~ one of those touchy subject which either gets you to hand tissues to the audience, start a protest or gets you shot. This one opting for the 3rd. That all people should be created equal, that all races should unite what a nice dream most normal people would like to see that even today ~~as~~ this would be nice not only racially discrimination but financial, gender, sexuality, disabilities are discriminated against.

Noel Pearsons - An Australian History for ~~all of us~~ ^{us all} is a good example of a speech which has other memorable speeches present in it he refers ~~to~~ to speeches said by politicians aboriginal activists & so on to get across his message of ~~how~~ how aborigines haven't been given a fair go how they must ~~surrender~~ surrender their beliefs so they can respect our history they must celebrate along with us 25th of January 'Australia Day' the day that white settlers came & invaded their home, the day that was to start new diseases & laws, killings & rapes. Exactly what I would wanting be seeking revenge on but its now part of their history a 'memorable' day they can come down and have the state wide breakfast watch entertainment then go home. He also gives reference to a John Howard speech were he doesnt want to appologize as it has nothing to do with him.
