

a) Democracy brought freedom to the German people during the Weimar period, bringing a big influx in culture & arts, but it was unsteady within the Government because of the still evident burdens of WWI, such as the Reparations, the loss of the Rhine land that was needed for mining, & the treaty of Versailles.

German people were still angry for the loss in WWI along with the bringing in of the punishments after the war with an already crumbled country. but nationalism mainly sparked by the NAZI party brought a new hope that Germany can be strong once again, by lifting a nations spirit & brought a new hope & power to the people of Germany.