

b) The young people of today have a diverse nature to them, Australia is a very multicultural society and therefore there would be a diverse range of cultures amongst young people in Australia today.

Amongst today's young people there are many different attitudes and backgrounds that young people have been brought up in - as well as environmental and social factors that contribute to health status. Different health choices will be made by all and there would be limitations to some people's health choices such as those who are socio-economically ^{disadvantaged}
