

- a. The physiological characteristics of an overtrained athlete are sometimes that they need to keep training or train harder to achieve their goal. In other cases the physiological characteristics of an overtrained athlete are that they need to slow themselves down a little otherwise they will end up making themselves not well.