

Judaism as a living religious tradition gives depth and meaning to the life of the individual and the Jewish community.

First as the quotation says "From generation to generation" we are able to see the passing of tradition through repeated and maintained rituals and beliefs. This provides depth and meaning to life as the Jewish community can feel responsible for maintaining and preserving what Judaism is about, thus providing depth and meaning to the individual and Jewish Community.

Through the establishment of many organisations and Interfaith Initiatives we can see that the Jewish community aim to "improve the world and to join with others who have the lofty aims," which provides a great deal of meaning to the life of the Jewish community and the individual as they feel they are benefitting the world in one way or another. One coalition that aims to "improve the world" is the Coalition of the Environment and Jewish Life ~~is~~ (COEJL). The COEJL aims to make the Jewish people more aware of the importance of preserving and caring for the environment. So if people do choose to listen to the COEJL and preserve the environment the individual and community can feel a sense of meaning to life as they are preserving the oneness of God's creation.

Then in regards to joining "with others who share the same lofty aims" this can be seen through interfaith initiatives such as the "Christian-Jewish Dialogue" an initiative aiming in resolving conflict and misconceptions between the two religions. So Judaism as a living religious tradition teaches the importance of peace, "shalom" and resolving conflict is a way to do this ~~and~~ which ~~inter~~ then provides a depth and meaning to life.

Now the most obvious way to view Judaism as a living religious tradition is within the synagogue services. The ~~synagogue~~ ^{synagogue} service ~~being~~ ^{can} traced back to the Babylonian exile in 487 BCE teaches ~~to the Jewish community~~ "How ~~to~~ ~~deepen~~ ~~our~~ ~~lives~~" ~~Through the service~~ The Jewish synagogue service is essentially the bringing together of all aspects of Jewish life revealed through worship. So as a result of involving oneself with the Synagogue service ~~there is a new~~ individuals can understand a meaning to life through being able to converse with God, whom would hopefully revealing to the individual a purpose on ~~what~~ how they should live their lives.

Finally, "Judaism teaches us how to deepen our lives", this is simply taught through Jewish scriptures, ~~a~~ more specifically the Torah, which are the 5 first books of the bible. The Torah outlines ~~it~~ and provides the guidelines for living a healthy nurturing life. The Torah provides the individual and

The Jewish community with a meaning and purpose to life revealed through the lessons and stories taught within the holy book. The Torah provides the ultimate means to living a deep and meaningful life as all responsibilities, ethics and duties are revealed to them through the Torah.

As you can see through the quotation we can see how Judaism as a living religious tradition gives depth and meaning to the life of the individual and the Jewish community. Whether that be through Coalitions, Interfaith Initiatives, Synagogue services or simply the Torah.
