All here, who you see to be present, think that it is necessary to fight this new wickedness brought forward in this unjust case, (however) they ~~do not~~ do not dare to defend it themselves on account of the unfairness of these times.

So it happens that they are here ~~on account of~~ ^{because} of their (that which follows) duty, however they remain silent for the reason, that they ~~and~~ avoid danger. What then? Am I the boldest out of ~~all~~ everyone? Not in the least. Or do I have ~~such~~ a greater sense of duty than the others? I am not so eager for praise of that kind that I would ~~not~~ wish it ^{to be} ~~taken away~~ from others.
