a) This was the truth; if the true pirate captain had been executed, you would have lost your money; if the bogus pirate had died or disappeared, it wouldn't have been difficult to display another one in place of the substitute. I have said much more than I intended to about that pirate captain, and nevertheless I will bring forth those proofs which are most evident of his crimes.

b) That Gavius, who you claimed had been sent for the purpose of spying, was entraped in the stone quarries<sup>of Syracuse</sup> by you, I will show this not only from the records of the Syracusans so that you are unable to say that because there was some random Gavius, I fetched and chose this name assuming that this man was our name, but I will grant witnesses of your own choosing who are able to say that Gavius had been led bound to the stone quarries at Syracuse by you.
