

Start here.

a) There are different government authorities ensuring that the automotive industry complies with environmental protection regulations since this particular industry deals with a lot of materials and procedures that can be very harmful to the environment if not dealt in the correct manner.

The EPA is the main government authority that the industry deals with. They ensure that hazardous materials such as coolant, oil and other harmful substances like de-greaser are disposed of correctly.

These authorities ensure that the automotive industry is causing the least minimal damage to the environment through their disposing of materials, air pollution and noise pollution.